CHANCE FOR M'KEE ROADWAY, AFTER ALL

Boggs Promises State Aid On Highway For 1923 and Will Start on Local Funds

There's a ray of hope for the building of a good road from Madison county to McKee, county seat of Jackson county, after all.

Squire W. M. Hurst, of Clover Bottom, Jackson county, who has been one of the most ardent workers for good roads in his section, writes the Daily Register about a new development which may open the way for this greatly needed highway.

He urges the co-operation of Madison county people. And undoubtedly he will receive it. It is probable that the Chamber of Commerce of Richmond may take up the suggestions he outlines at once, and get busy. Squire Hurst letter is self-explanatory:

Clover Bottom, Ky., Apr. 17.
My Dear Mr. Sanfley:

I was at McKee yesterday and saw a letter from the State Road Department, or rather from Mr. Joe Boggs, saying that after our committee left Frankfort last week that a thought had occurred to him, and that was this: That if this county would put up our money that the road department might lay out our road and allow us to let a contract and start work with state aid in 1923.

Now, my dear Mr. Sanfley, that would be about as good as we could ask for. We know that it would about take that long to get ready to work anyway, so if the people of Richmond would get together and give this question a big boost, I believe that it will very largely assist us people to get our road started. Of course we will do all we can to get this road started but we cannot afford to make an unreasonable sacrifice of our money as it is going to take all we can possibly raise to finance our part.

We have given Mr. Boggs a reply and I hope the Daily Register will be pleased to help us in this matter. I am sure that the people have read and thought on what you said in your last talk in your paper and probably that was the cause of some person or persons thinking at least. I am sure fine for a thought to start. I will advise you on anything I learn later. And as the mail is waiting I must close at present.

W. M. HURST.

DID YOU HAVE THE MISSING WORD RIGHT?

Mighty few of 'em found that missing word in last Thursday's page of advertisements.

And the Missing Word editor thought he'd made it easy, too. Read the advertisement of Push-in's Fashion Shop last Thursday. It tells of the bargains in his various lines. Skirts, blouses, sport coats, sweaters, etc. But not a word is said about one of his chief lines—MILLINERY.

The word Millinery was removed from the advertisement just after the word Blouses in the next to last line of the advertisement. Very, very few got it.

But perhaps the missing word in the page of advertisements this week won't be so hard. We'll try not to make it so hard anyway. The contest is pretty even for the cash prizes that are being offered. Some get the answers right one week and some the next. If you miss it this week, you may get it next. Keep reading the advertisements. It will pay you.

ESCAPED PRISONER RETURNS TO JAIL

Gang, Decides To Return and Be Good

Jailer Charles Rogers was awakened about nine o'clock the other night by a knocking on the jail door. He opened it and found that Dewey Powell had returned to jail.

Young Powell had broken the lock of a ball and chain to which he was attached a day or so ago while out with the road working gang of prisoners, and disappeared before the guards could catch him. He has been serving a 30-day and $10 sentence for beating Jonah Alcorn of the Freeman's Hollow section, and before that was held to the grand jury on a charge of shooting at a man named Jackson in the same community. He was out on bond on this charge, however, when sentenced on the Alcorn charge.

Dewey got tired of making little rocks out of big ones and tried to get away. So it was decided to put a ball and chain on him to keep him safely. He put up quite a battle as he was being taken out of jail, officers say, so was left in his cell that day while the rest of the crew went out. The next day he decided the great outdoors in springtime was preferable to being cooped up all day in jail. So he notified the jailer of his willingness to go to work with the road hands. A ball and chain was secured for him as a precautionary measure, however, and he was taken along. Once on the road, he refused to work, the officials say, and spent most of the day cracking walnuts on the heavy iron ball to which he was attached.

Later while the guards weren't looking, he secured an ax and hammer, and smashed the lock, and "beat it" for Freeman's Hollow and other points unknown.

Nothing was done about his escape. His bondsmen on the grand jury charge had been released after Powell had been held on the Alcorn charge. But late one night Powell called Sheriff Deatherage on the telephone and told him he was out in the country and to come and get him. The sheriff had been riding all day, so told Dewey he'd better just come back in himself—that it might go easier with him. Anyway, he was tired and wasn't going way out to the country that late at night after him.

So Dewey, like the cat, came back, and is at work on the road again like a good boy.

Town Marshal Shoots Two Mullins Men After One Had Hit Blind Police Judge, Says Judge Chenault

J. C. Chenault returned Wednesday from Livingston where he had been with a gentleman from Pittsburg, Pa., whom he was trying to interest in some coal lands. He says that just as he returned to Livingston from an inspection of the coal lands, he and his friend saw that police court was in session and they started to enter the court room and in that way pass the time until their train for Richmond arrived. Just as they were about to enter, shooting began in the court room. Judge Chenault says that as soon as the shooting ceased he went in and saw two men lying on the floor, one dead; the other appeared to be dying.

The man killed was Obe Mullins, 45. The other man was Charles Mullins, 48.

The cause of the shooting as near as Judge Chenault could learn occurred in this way: Some boy who had been summoned to appear in court came about an hour sooner than the time the trial in which he was to testify would be heard. Charles Mullins said to the boy, "You could have spent an hour at home."

The police judge, Bob Ford, who is blind, stated "I fine you $5 for contempt of court." Mullins said "All right, judge. I hope you will look after my wife and children while I am in jail, I am unable to pay the fine." The judge said, "I fine you $3 for that speech."

Mullins then struck the judge with a stick. The judge began to say, "Shoot him." The town marshal, Bill Gillis, opened up on Mullins and in a few seconds the court house was cleared of all spectators and litigants except the two Mullins.
